They went away to a pretty break, and the Goldinder and Saturday at once went to the front. They made the pace a length and a half in front of Whiskey King, who was a length in front of Major Dangerfield. Blue Girl had been squeezed back and was among the tailenders. When they swung into the stretch Odom shot Whiskey King to the front and had the two lenders beaten. Then Blue Girl came through, but could into the light breeze behind the sprinters, together with liberal handicaps, made the times fast in the short-distance event, which opened the pro-

Brooklyn Derby; for three-year-olds; one and a half.

The Parader, with all his weight, made the running because he was rank and could not be placed. Blues laid second and Bonnbert trailed. There was much criticism of Landry's riding during the placed. The Parader was been could also seem that the latter was still going under wraps when they made the far turn. Coming into the stretch the crowd expected to see The Parader come away, but finished the commenced to wear out, placed to see The Parader over the head with his whip, and hefore he could straighten him.
